

Act 4: Summary

Gertrude tells Claudius about what has just happened with Polonius. Claudius realises that it would have been him killed if he had been the one hiding behind the curtain. Claudius is now fully aware Hamlet knows what he did and knows he needs to get rid of him. Claudius, pretending to be concerned that Hamlet's madness has driven him to violence, tells Gertrude that they should send Hamlet to England to be 'looked after' by friends. Claudius sends Rosencrantz and Guildenstern to go and find him.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern find Hamlet, who initially refuses to tell them where Polonius' body is, giving confusing responses. The location of the body is finally revealed: under the stairs in the castle.

Hamlet accuses Rosencrantz and Guildenstern of being spies for Claudius. He eventually agrees to go to the King and is sent to England to be 'looked after'. However, Claudius has more sinister motives for Hamlet's journey. He gives Rosencrantz and Guildenstern a sealed letter for the English King, asking for Hamlet to be killed immediately.

Ophelia, driven mad with grief at the death of her father and the loss of Hamlet, sees Gertrude. She is dressed strangely and singing odd songs.

Laertes furiously bursts in, bloodthirsty for revenge. Claudius assures him that he is not the person who killed Polonius and he must get his revenge on the guilty person.

Horatio receives a letter from Hamlet. Hamlet reveals that the ship he was put on to England was seized by pirates. Once the pirates realised who he was, they panicked and dropped him in a fishing village in Denmark. Hamlet also has a message for the king and queen, making it clear that he will return and put right the wrongs that have been done.

Claudius speaks to Laertes, secretly thinking of a way Laertes can kill Hamlet without it looking like Claudius has anything to do with it. He suggests a fencing match, which would give Laertes the chance to stab Hamlet with his sword. Laertes agrees to this plan and also suggests he poisons his sword. Claudius agrees and thinks of a 'plan B' if Hamlet happens to win the fencing match: he will offer Hamlet a cup of wine to celebrate his victory, but the wine will be poisoned.

Gertrude arrives and shares the sad news that Ophelia, driven mad by her grief, has drowned. This adds even more fuel to Laertes' anger and desire for revenge.

Act 4, Lesson 1: Newspaper features

Learning Intention	To explore the features of a newspaper and their purpose.
Key Vocabulary	headline, orientation paragraph, third person, time adverbials, chronological order, quotes from witnesses/eyewitnesses, paragraphs, image, caption
Activities/ Lesson	Introduction: Have a selection of model newspaper reports out on tables at the start of the lesson. What genre of writing is this? What is its job? Who might read this and why? Explain that these are examples of newspaper reports. Provide a straightforward explanation of their purpose, i.e. 'We read them to find out about real things that have happened.' Elicit pupils' prior knowledge on their features. What do they know already? Give around 5 minutes for children to make a note on whiteboards or post its of any features they are already familiar with. Main Input: Introduce pupils to each feature from the features menu, explaining the job/purpose of each one. After each explanation, challenge pupils to find an example in their own model texts. Main Activity 1 – find the features! Using their features menu, children should then have a go at identifying and labelling the features independently on an example text. They could number the features, use colour coding or label an example on their text- this will depend on your cohort. Main Activity 2- true or false? Provide children with a series of statements about newspaper reports. Ask children to decide whether they are true or false. For example: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Newspaper reports should have lots of adjectives and similes.</li> <li>• Newspaper reports contain facts about something that has happened.</li> <li>• Newspaper reports should contain the opinion of the person who wrote it.</li> <li>• Newspaper reports might have a quote (“...”) from someone who was there.</li> </ul>
Notes for Teachers	Gather a range of age-appropriate model newspaper reports in advance of the lesson and ensure each one shows the range of features you would like pupils to spot.
Adaptive Teaching	Support: Pupils could focus on just one model text which could be pre-read to them in advance.
Resources	Features menu

Act 4, Lesson 2: What's happened and what do our witnesses think?

Learning Intention	To understand key events and possible witness responses
Key Vocabulary	order, events, witness/eyewitness, statement, hot-seating
Activities/ Lesson	Warm-up Explain to children that an effective newspaper report gives information in chronological order: in the order events happened. Ask the children what their morning routine is in chronological order and think of a short phrase/action for each event, i.e. 'brush teeth', 'uniform', 'breakfast', 'school'. Ask children to spread out in the classroom/a hall space if available and respond with the phrase + action when you say 1, 2, 3... etc. Part 1: What happened? Remind children of the key events at the end of Act 3 and in Act 4 and explain that we will be writing a newspaper report on the murder of Polonius and what has happened to Hamlet since. As a class, sit in a circle and explore the summaries and quotes. You may need to explain some of the vocabulary in the quotes. Stand up in a circle. Together, think of an action that could go along with each moment. Practise: You say the quote and do the agreed action, pupils repeat it with the action and say the quote themselves. Then, make it trickier: you say the summary, they do the quote and action. Ask the children to find a space in the room and walk the space sensibly. Read one summary at a time (shorten these further for ease). When you do, pupils have to say the matching quote and perform the action you have practised. Repeat this a couple of times until pupils can confidently recall the action and quote for each moment. Then, reduce to one key word for each moment, i.e. 'murder', 'caught' etc. Finally, use one clap to move pupils on to the next moment and practise. Part 2: Hot-seating Tell children that now they are experts on the events that happened, let's find out what some witnesses and eyewitnesses will have seen, felt or thought! Explain the difference between a witness and an eyewitness, and the important role they play in a newspaper report. Ask pupils to go back to their groups of 6 from the quote matching activity and sit in a circle as a group. Explain to them that they will be given a card, which will tell them who they are. If they are a journalist, their job is to ask questions and take notes on what their witness/eyewitness says. You will need to model both asking quality questions and setting the expectation for the quality of responses. When you ring a bell, ask pupils to swap cards within their group so everybody gets a turn both asking the questions and answering in role. Plenary/reflection Ask children: if newspaper reports are meant to be factual, why is having a quote from a witness or eyewitness helpful?
Notes for	A hall space would be ideal for this lesson if possible.

Teachers
Adaptive Teaching	Some children may benefit from a bank of question starters or sentence stems for responding in role.
Resources	Main events summaries and quotes Hot-seating cards (to be cut up)

Act 4, Lesson 3: Witness/eyewitness quotes

Learning Intention	To plan and correctly punctuate witness/eyewitness quotes.
Key Vocabulary	quotes, witness, eyewitness, inverted commas, verb, direct speech
Activities/ Lesson	Introduction Display the ‘reporter questions’ on the board and then call out a possible witness/eyewitnesses’ name at a time, i.e. Claudius, Gertrude, Rosencrantz, Horatio, Ophelia etc. What would they say in response to each question? Discuss with partners. Main input: Tell children that they have just done an excellent job coming up with possible witness/eyewitness quotes- but as reporters, it’s just as important to make sure they’re punctuated correctly. If your newspaper report does not use correct punctuation, you may lose the trust of your reader! Use one of their ideas from the introduction and model the punctuation needed for accurate direct speech. Some misconceptions to look out for and make an explicit teaching point of will be: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• random capital letters following inverted commas, i.e. “I am devastated,” Commented Ophelia. With this, remind children you are not starting a new sentence.</li> <li>• missing comma before opening/closing inverted commas, i.e. Claudius stated “I cannot...” or “I cannot believe that brute’s actions” Claudius stated.</li> <li>• thinking they must re-open their inverted commas if they start a new sentence- remember, a witness statement could be an entire paragraph!</li> <li>• using more formal speech verbs- previous experience of direct speech may be from writing stories so their repertoire of speech verbs may be shouted, bellowed, whispered etc- all of which wouldn’t belong in a newspaper report (use the ‘sound like a reporter’ list instead)</li> </ul> Main activity Provide children with a list of possible witnesses/eyewitnesses (either on the board or drawing on the characters from the introduction). They will need to create at least three extended quotes- one sentence is not enough- from different witnesses/eyewitnesses. If they are stuck about what to include, they can look back at the reporter questions prompts from the introduction. Plenary: peer editing Display a list of common errors on the board or a checklist for accurately punctuating direct speech. Ask children, in pairs, to read through their witness quotes with their partners and double check their work against this, editing as they go.
Notes for Teachers	Having high-quality witness statements to look back on, already accurately punctuated, will hopefully reduce the cognitive load during the final writing outcome and give children one less thing to think about. It is worth building in plenty of editing time on this lesson so that children are drawing on accurate examples later in the week.

Adaptive Teaching	See colour-coded speech strip. As an extension, children could split the speech into parts, with the 'who said it' and speech verb in the middle.
Resources	Reporter questions prompt 'Sound like a reporter' prompt Colour-coded speech strip

Act 4, Lesson 4: Draft!

Learning Intention	To write an effective newspaper report.
Key Vocabulary	headline, orientation paragraph, alliteration, main body, time adverbials
Activities/ Lesson	NB this lesson is a 'I teach, you do, I teach, you do' format- you can adjust the pace or structure for your cohort. Headline Explain that an effective newspaper report begins with a high-quality headline to grab your reader's attention and to give them a sneak preview of what the report is about. Collate some examples of headlines and ask what shared features they notice. They will hopefully identify that it should be short and succinct; use big, bold capital letters; have some alliteration; and be in the present tense. As a class, generate some example headlines using the alliterative headline phrases provided ('Handy Headline Hints'). Then, children choose their own (they can discuss this in groups) and write down in their books. Orientation paragraph Remind children that the job of this paragraph is to give the reader the most important bits of information... the Ws! What happened? When? Where? Who was involved? Why is it thought to have happened? Discuss with pupils what the answers to these questions could be and make notes on flipchart paper as a scaffold. Then, in partners, have a go at drafting the orientation paragraphs on whiteboards or scrap paper before reading aloud to sense-check and writing in their books. Main body (first paragraph) Use the newspaper report structure prompt and the time adverbials bank to model the first main body paragraph of the report. Include a witness statement and remind children to look back through their books for examples of their own witness statements. Then, give children plenty of time to write. Plenary: self-edit Ask children to swap their normal pens/pencils with their editing pen and read their work aloud to themselves to spot any parts that do not make sense. Because this is quite a different style of writing to any other genre, sentences that don't quite make sense are the most likely pitfall. Children should then read their work again, this time, looking for spelling and punctuation errors.
Notes for Teachers	Use first main body paragraph to gauge any misconceptions/errors to be ironed out in other paragraphs and tailor tomorrow's input to this.
Adaptive Teaching	Support: Provide a multiple choice of headlines. Draft orientation paragraph in a guided group. Provide sentence starters and key words for first main body paragraph.
Resources	Prepare some headlines in advance to explore

	Handy Headline Hints resource
--	--------------------------------------

	Newspaper report structure + time adverbials support sheet
--	---

Act 4, Lesson 5: Finish, edit, publish!

Learning Intention	To write an effective newspaper report.
Key Vocabulary	main body, paragraphs/columns, time adverbials
Activities/ Lesson	NB you may wish to extend this lesson into two: one to finish the main body; another to publish- this will allow time for marking/feedback and editing before publishing. Main input &amp; independent task Ensure pupils have a copy of the newspaper report structure sheet and ask them to find where we got up to yesterday. Explain that today, we will be writing the next two paragraphs of the main body of our newspaper. Go through the questions in each paragraph one at a time, scribing children's ideas/responses on flipchart paper as bullet point notes. They can then refer to this while they are writing. Also indicate with a speech bubble and some names who your witness/eyewitness statements in each paragraph could be. Model turning your first few bullet points into full sentences to ensure children are clear that they are not ready-made sentences, just prompts for them to draw on! Then, give children plenty of time to write these next two paragraphs. Plenary: peer-edit Ask children, with their partners, to number themselves 1 and 2 or A/B. 1s will go first while 2s will support, then they will swap. Go through this editing process: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• 1s, read your work aloud to 2s. 2s, help them spot any missing words or sentences that don't make sense.</li> <li>• 1s, read your work with 2s. Look for any missing punctuation or spelling mistakes.</li> <li>• 1s, read your work again with 2s. Find somewhere to add more detail- perhaps another witness statement or an extra piece of information about an event.</li> </ul> ... then, swap, so each child's work gets to be the focus. Publish Using the newspaper report publishing template, children should then publish their finished pieces.
Notes for Teachers	Use first main body paragraph to gauge any misconceptions/errors to be ironed out in other paragraphs and tailor tomorrow's input to this.
Adaptive Teaching	Provide sentence starters and key words for main body paragraphs.
Resources	Newspaper report structure + time adverbials support sheet  Newspaper report publishing template

Resources

Newspaper Features Menu

THE ELSINORE ECHO
Newspaper name

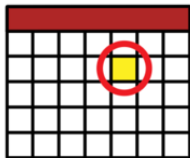

What?
When?
Where?
Who?

Orientation paragraph

HAMLET'S MURDEROUS MISTAKE

Headline

Date

Paragraphs

Image and caption

Third person

After,
At ...
o'clock,

Time adverbials

Quotes from witnesses/eyewitnesses

Key Events Summaries

1. Thinking Claudius is hiding behind it, Hamlet stabs through a curtain. Polonius is behind it and is killed.

Hamlet in madness has Polonius slain

And from his mother's closets has he dragged him.

OR

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell.

2. Hamlet drags the body out of the room and refuses to reveal to Rosencrantz where it is.

My lord, you must tell us where the body is and go with us to the king.

3. Claudius decides that Hamlet must be sent away to England to 'live with friends'.

Delay it not, I'll have him hence tonight.

4. Claudius tells Hamlet and sends him away on a ship to England.

The bark is ready, and the wind at help.

5. With her father dead and Hamlet gone, Ophelia is devastated and has begun to go mad with grief.

Oh, this is the poison of deep grief!

6. Laertes (Polonius' son) returns from France, hears of his father's death and swears to get revenge.

I'll be revenged

Most thoroughly for my father.

Hot-seating character cards

You are a journalist.

Who...?

What...?

When...?

Where...?

Why...?

How...?

You are Claudius.

You are outraged about what Hamlet has done.

You need to try and make him sound as mad, bad and out of control as you can.

You'd want to cover up your plans for him in England and make it seem like he will be well looked after.

You are Laertes.

You are furious about what Hamlet has done.

You will be seeking revenge.

You know he may read the newspaper, so this would be a good chance to warn him.

You are a journalist.

Who...?

What...?

When...?

Where...?

Why...?

How...?

You are Rosencrantz.

You have known Hamlet for a long time.

You are loyal to Claudius and Gertrude.

You have seen Hamlet 'go mad'.

You will be helping take him to England.

You are Gertrude.

You are extremely worried about Hamlet.

You agree with Claudius that he has definitely 'lost his wits'.

You are also worried about Ophelia and feel very sorry for her.

Reporter Questions

What relation are you to Hamlet?

How has he seemed recently? Do his actions fit with the person you know?

What do you think of what he has done?

What do you think should happen next?

Sound like a reporter

The witness...

commented stated revealed described remarked explained

Speech

“ _____ ”

“ ... ”

what the witness said

_____

speech verb _____

_____

Name _____

strips

_____

Name _____

_____

speech verb _____

_____

“ ... ”

what the witness said

_____

_____

Handy Headline Hints

MURDEROUS MISTAKE

HORRIFIED HAMLET

SHOCKING SLAYING

PRINCE'S PANIC

ROYAL REGRET

POLONIUS PERISHES

SUDDEN STAB

A FINAL CURTAIN CALL

FATAL FAUX PAS

SUDDEN SLAUGHTER

FATAL FUMBLE

Newspaper Report Structure

Monday 12th February, 1601

THE ELSINORE ECHO

HORRIFIED HAMLET'S MURDEROUS MISTAKE: PRINCE KILLS POLONIUS

Orientation paragraph

Tell me:

What happened on the day of the murder?

How has Hamlet been behaving recently?

What could be the reasons behind his behaviour? Why would he want to kill Claudius?

Tell me:

What is Hamlet thought to have done? How?

What did Hamlet do with the body?

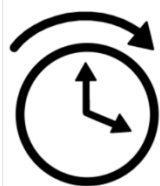

Did Hamlet mean to kill Polonius?

Tell me:

What has happened to Hamlet since?

How are the people close to him/Polonius feeling about this?

What will happen next?

Time adverbials

Yesterday,
At... o'clock,
Soon after,
On the day of this tragic event,
In recent weeks,
Meanwhile,
Since the event,
Soon,

Additional 'page 2' sheet if needed!

