No- because Polixenes and Camillo went in disguise. Also, after Florizel proposes Polixenes asks him whether his father knows that he's just asked someone to marry him- Florizel says, "he neither does, nor shall". They they have an argument before Polixenes reveals his true self!

Because he makes more money for himself!

19. Do you think Camillo is right in thinking that if Polixenes goes to the court of Leontes everyone will be forgiven and become friends again?

Answers will depend but as long as they are justified – for example they might say a long time has past so Leontes will have changed/the picture of Leontes shows how unhappy he is so this would indicate he's sorry for what has happened/ the fact that Florizel and Perdita are actually the son and daughter of the old friends might bring everyone together. Opposing views might be Polixenes now feels betrayed by his son so may never be able to forgive him/Leontes won't recognise Perdita because so much time has passed...
